Government Trying To Prove Lewis Responsible For Strike

WASHINGTON, April 14—Government attorneys drove hard today to prove that John L. Lewis was responsible for the 29-day coal mine shutdown and thus was guilty of contempt of court in refusing to heed an order to end it.

Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough, Lewis' nemesis in the 1946 strike, curtly rejected a defense attempt to win dismissal of the contempt case after the United Mine Workers president pleaded innocent.

The Justice department developed its case against Lewis in a tense, jammed courtroom where the UMW leader sat impassive as his battery of lawyers sought to block the government's attempt to show that he defied the federal court and deserves severe punishment.

The defense scored a victory on one point when Judge Goldsborough ruled that a government witness must refrain from referring to the coal mine shutdown as a "strike".

THE WITNESS was Dr. W. H. Young, chief of the bituminous coal section of the U. S. Bureau of Mines.

Through Young, the government began to build its case to prove that the walkout of 400,000 miners was not "spontaneous," as Lewis contends, but the result of concerted action dictated by the UMW chief.

Young also was called upon by Assistant Attorney General H. Graham Morison to show that the walkout menaced the national health and safety.

It was this menace on which the temporary injunction Lewis is accused of defying was based.

Although Lewis on Monday gave the word to his miners to go back to the pits following a compromise solution to the pension dispute—a solution which the operators are fighting—more than 200,000 diggers remained away from their jobs.

They are awaiting the outcome of the contempt trial and some have asserted they will remain idle indefinitely if their leader is punished.

LEWIS' innocent plea was entered to both civil and criminal contempt charges, through Willy K. Hopkins, UMW counsel.

The UMW attorney told the court that the rule to show cause should be dismissed because it (Continued on Page Two)

DOFFING HIS HAT, Harold Stassen, who swept the Wisconsin primary election last week and Tuesday paced six other Republican presidential aspirants in a Nebraska contest, greets students at Nebraska university, Lincoln, shortly after first returns were announced showing the former Minnesota governor being given the support of the Cornhusker State's GOP voters.

Taft's Nebraska Showing Disappoints Ohio Backers

COLUMBUS, April 14—A pall of gloom hung over the Ohio Republican headquarters today as the result of the third-place showing the organization's favorite son candidate for President, Sen. Robert A. Taft, made in the Nebraska primary.

Taft placed behind Former Minnesota Gov. Harold E. Stassen and New York Gov. Thomas E. Dewey. The would-be Taft President-makers had hoped their candidate would be first and thus assure himself of Nebraska's 15 national convention delegates.

Unofficial reports from 1,450 of the Cornhusker State's 2,024 precincts today gave Stassen 35,303 votes to Dewey's 42,690.

Taft is running a poor third in the seven-man race are trailing as follows: Sen. Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan, 4,465; Gen. Douglas MacArthur, 3,829; Gov. Earl Warren of California, 1,006, and Speaker of the House Joseph W. Martin Jr., 450.

STASSEN, the young war veteran from the Middle West, astounded the Republican chieftains by winning smashing victories in two successive primaries—Wisconsin and Nebraska. His success will change Republican thinking.

Most GOP strategists made Taft the favorite in Nebraska after Stassen won the Wisconsin primary while giving Dewey a shutout defeat.

Now Stassen has defeated both Dewey and Taft in Nebraska. Dewey ran close to the Minnesotan while Taft fell far behind.

The preferential balloting had no real effect on the delegates elected at the same time. The Nebraska delegation is reliably reported to be split: Taft, seven; Stassen, five; Dewey three.

Stassen's managers can be expected to try to raid both Dewey and Taft delegates due to his victory. GOP strategists say Stassen may win a few more delegates from Nebraska on the (Continued on Page Two)

De Gasperi Sure Italy To Whip Reds In Election

ROME, April 14—Italian Premier Alcide de Gasperi declared today that his Christian Democratic Party and other parties in the present coalition government will win victory over the Communists in Sunday's general election.

De Gasperi said his government is fully aware of the desire of certain Communist circles to bring about an insurrection.

But he said the government has taken all necessary precautions against a Leftist uprising and does not believe a revolt will occur.

The premier returned to Rome today ahead of schedule from a speaking trip to Milan where he warned the Communists against insurrection.

Honor Day Set

COLUMBUS, April 14—Governor Herbert declared May 16 as "I Am An American Day" today and called upon Ohioans to "honor all who have become citizens in the last year either by naturalizations or by attainment by their majority."

More Troops Demanded

Bradley Tells Soviet Strength

WASHINGTON, April 14—Gen. Omar Bradley, Army chief of staff, told Congress today that the Soviet Union can raise 395 army divisions "in less than 60 days."

He said the United States has nine and one-third divisions at the present time.

Bradley also warned that in the event of another war, the United States must occupy Greenland, Iceland, Spitzbergen and the Azores or the United States will be open to enemy air attack.

The general advised the House armed services committee, holding public hearings on selective service legislation, that "we have about 54,000 troops in combat units (in the United States) which could be used for an emergency." Another 100,000 combat troops are guarding the occupied areas.

THE ARMY chief cautioned Congress against "unbalancing" the armed services by establishing a 70-group Air Force at the expense of the Army or the Navy. The Truman administration is backing a 55-group Air Force.

The general made a strong plea for enactment of Universal Military Training in the face of strong opposition in Congress to the peacetime program.

Meanwhile, the House prepared to act on a special appropriation bill containing new funds for aircraft amid a strong move to expand the United States Air Force to 70 groups.

The House armed services committee threw its support behind a proposal to add another one or two billion dollars to the two and a third billion dollar bill to permit still further expansion of the USAF.

Soviets Snub Trieste Talks

LONDON, April 14—The Soviet Union turned thumbs down today on the Anglo-French-American proposal for a four-power parley to discuss the return of Trieste to Italy.

Moscow radio said that notes have been dispatched to the three Western Powers informing them that their proposal is "unacceptable" in its present form. Specifically, the Russian note, objected to revision of the Italian peace treaty through "correspondence or by convening private conferences."

Vote Upheld

COLUMBUS, April 14—The state supreme court upheld today the right of the Columbus city council to hold a special referendum election June 8 on the city's one-half percent payroll-income tax.

Hughes, Meyers Lashed By Committee's Report

WASHINGTON, April 14—A report prepared for the Senate war investigating committee today denounced Howard Hughes and Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers for failing to report "negotiations of an obviously corrupt nature."

The report disclosed that Internal Revenue Bureau field agents have recommended that the Hughes Tool Co., parent firm of the Hughes financial empire, be compelled to pay the government a most $8.5 million in deficient taxes for 1940 through 1946.

A majority of the committee has approved the report but it has not been signed by all members of the investigating group.

The findings held that the Hughes-Kaiser flying boat project was "an unwise and unjustifiable expense as a wartime project" and similarly criticized his photo-reconnaissance program.

Postal Receipts In First Quarter Near Peak Mark

According to figures released Wednesday by A. Hulse Hays, Circleville postmaster, the local postoffice has sold $14,320.60 worth of stamps and stamped papers during the first quarter of 1948.

The amount is the second largest first quarter figure ever recorded by the local postoffice. The highest figure was recorded in a corresponding period in 1945, when $15,814.32 worth of stamps were sold.

Hays said January receipts were the greatest in the history of the local office, with $5,766.39 recorded.

February and March were about average, with $4,244.03 in February and $4,310.18 in March. The figures for both the latter months were topped in 1945.

Hays said that a new all-time record had been set for the first 13 calendar days of April, a total $3,078.29 having been sold during that period.

The fifth annual Diamond Jubilee dinner honoring the 81 veteran members of the Trinity Lutheran church and Christ church at Lick Run who have attained the age of 75 or older will be held in the parish house in Circleville Friday night.

Members of the planning committee for the occasion say there are to be 75 honored from Circleville's Trinity church and six from nearby Christ church.

A steak banquet will start festivities for the evening, followed by short talks and addresses.

A LIST OF THOSE to be honored at the jubilee follows: Ed Blum, Mrs. Charles Barthelmas, Mrs. Julia Bartholomew, Mrs. R. E. ## Emergency's End In Sight As Rains Start To Subside

6 States Feel Raging Ohio Burst Over Banks Into Lowlands

By International News Service Thousands of persons in six states were homeless today as continued rains sent the Ohio river raging from its banks from Pittsburgh to Cairo, Ill.

Lowlands and rural communities were flooded while major cities waited anxiously behind floodwalls.

However, an end to the emergency was foreseen when the U. S. Weather Bureau predicted the rains would end sometime today.

The Louisville and Nashville

Railroad suspended service between Cincinnati and Louisville because of the floods as Kentucky's Governor Clements telegraphed the Federal Works Administration in Chicago that an emergency exists.

CLEMENTS said the turbulent waters were working disastrous results in Johnson, Pike and Floyd Counties and asked federal aid in repairing washed out bridges and roads.

More than 50 families were moved out of Falmouth, Ky., about midnight after a near-cloudburst hit the city, knocking out the power plant and the water supply.

Upstream at Cynthiana, more than 150 homes were up to seven feet in the muddy waters, but the flood was reported receding.

Police Chief Leslie Miller said the deluge was the worst in the city's history.

At Newport, two steel fabricating plants of the International Detrola Corp., shut down and the 2,300 employees started moving machinery from the path of the rising waters.

City Manager Oscar Hesch ordered the police to evacuate forcefully all people in the thickly populated district behind the floodwall. The Red Cross said it had requests for 82 evacuations and 40 families were moved out over night.

Scioto Hits 19.1 Crest

Big Flood Danger Passed, Expert Says

The Scioto river at Circleville reached a high mark of 19.10 feet at 8 a. m. Wednesday and was showing signs of slowly receding without causing heavy damage in Pickaway County even though much of the bottom lands adjacent to the Scioto Valley were under water.

Charles Carter, local weather observer, said from all indications the flood crest has been reached and unless unexpected heavy rains fall again the major flood danger is over.

Weather observers predicted fair and warmer for Thursday and forecast clearing skies by tonight thus eliminating any immediate danger of additional rains adding water to already swollen river basins.

Three highways in Pickaway County remained closed Wednesday morning, Carter warned.

U. S. Route 23 south to Portsmouth is under water at the Chillicothe bridge and at Piketon. That road is open, however, as far south as Chillicothe. State Route 104 is open as a detour route south.

ROUTE 56 remained closed Wednesday at its intersection with U. S. Route 22 east of Circleville. (Continued on Page Two)

Pan-Am Parley Being Resumed

BOGOTA, April 14—The Inter-American conference, interrupted Friday by the Colombian revolt, resumed sessions today in a suburb of battle-seared Bogota.

Delegates will go back to work, significantly, on Pan-American day despite continued sporadic firing by snipers in the Colombian capital.

Colombian troops cruised the streets in tanks to comb out the last nests of snipers and generally had the situation under control.

The first session of the resumed parley will be held in a suburban school. The steering committee is expected to resume its meetings later in the capitol building.

Ammo Truck Blows, Rocks Ancient City

JERUSALEM, April 14—A heavy explosion rocked the Jewish Yemin Moshe quarter of Jerusalem today when Arabs sent an explosive-filled truck careening into a vacant house.

The driverless truck was started down hill and blew up when it crashed into the unoccupied structure. There were no casualties.

An official announcement said that 12 Arabs were killed and 15 wounded when Jews penetrated Arab territory and raided Lajjun village near Jenin.

Huge clouds of smoke, billowing hundreds of feet into the air, rolled over Jerusalem after the Yemin Moshe blast.

It was learned in Jerusalem that more than 100 persons were killed in yesterday's Arab ambush of a Jewish hospital convoy and the subsequent fighting.

Among the dead are three professors from the Hebrew university, the director and assistant director of the Jewish cancer institute in Palestine, and several Jewish physicians and nurses.

Banks Get Call

WASHINGTON, April 14—Preston Delano, comptroller of the currency, today instructed all banks to report their financial conditions as of April 12.

Housing Aid Talks Start

Senate Debates $5 Billion Bill

WASHINGTON, April 14—The Senate opens debate today on the $5 billion Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill aimed at providing 7.5 million new homes in five years.

Sen. Taft, (R) Ohio, said he will bring up the measure today. Its public housing provisions are expected to run into opposition spearheaded by Sen. McCarthy, (R) Wis., who opposed them vigorously in the Senate banking committee.

Private housing would be given the impetus of federal insurance of $1.6 billion worth of FHA home mortgages, plus $1 billion for yield insurance to bring big investors into the apartment field.

For slum clearance, the bill would authorize $1 billion in loans to cities, plus $100 million yearly in subsidies for five (Continued on Page Two)

Committee Sets Commie Signup

WASHINGTON, April 14—The House unAmerican activities committee voted today to compel the annual registration of all members of the Communist party and allied organizations.

The group approved an amendment to proposed legislation to curb Communist activities in the United States which would require that membership lists of the party and its front organizations be turned over to the Justice department.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

The Russians have dug up a Rachmaninoff piano score for six hands—now they're trying to dig up a Russian with six hands to play it.

Rachmaninoff is not living so if the Soviet cultural body doesn't like the composition they will have to try him in absentia—and it's a nice way to be tried.

The work will be performed soon in Russia and when it comes over here it will be for eight hands—six playing and two standby.

In fact, I hear Petrillo is green with envy and keeps going around saying, "Why didn't I think of that!"

houses called off a strike threatened for midnight tonight to help move people and valuables from the endangered lowlands area.

The Red Cross set up its third temporary shelter to handle an expected crowd of 500 refugees. The organization said 5,000 persons would be affected if the water reached 59 feet.

Upstream at Portsmouth, a mobile radio unit sent from the U. S. naval air station at Columbus, blanketed out at 5:30 a. m.

The truck had been stationed near the Ohio river bank and Columbus naval authorities said it probably was on the move to higher ground.

City officials predicted a crest of 64.4 feet Friday.

Portsmouth is protected by an eight-mile floodwall up to 62 feet. City officials had 30,000 sandbags on hand and predicted they could keep the waters out up to 66 feet. In March of 1945, the wall was sandbagged to a height which kept out a 64.5-foot level.

Meanwhile, hundreds of families in rural communities surrounding Portsmouth were forced from their homes.

Ironton rested securely behind a $4 million flood wall, but residences at neighboring Hanging Rock, Coal Grove, Chesapeake, Proctor and part of the hill section of Lawrence County were flooded. Farmers were reported turning their stock into the hills.

AT GALLIPOLIS, all rail service was discontinued, five crews of the C and O railroad were stranded and the last bus line to Huntington, W. Va., gave up late yesterday.

The water stood at almost 39 feet at Marietta and was expected to enter the main business district later today.

A company of 100 National Guardsmen directed traffic and supervised the removal of goods from the lowlands area where 125 people were moved out over night.

Blasting Said Home-Wrecker

CLEVELAND, April 14—Jack McCleery of Cleveland will go to court today to seek in a roundabout fashion the return of his wife.

McCleery contends that the construction of a water intake tunnel near his home on Cleveland's home has made both he and his wife, and their four-year-old son, Michael, "nervous wrecks" and has made his $14,100 home unsafe for habitation.

McCleery stated that blasting operations carried on by the Kalill Co. from early in the morning to late at night have forced him to send his wife, Dorothy, and their son to Florida for a two-week rest.

Through his attorney, McCleery will ask in Cuyahoga County common pleas court that the Kalill Co. be restrained from using explosives at night or in any way which would deprive the occupants of normal use of the residence. He also seeks damages of $15,000.

years. For low rent housing, subsidies would range from $32 million in the 1949 fiscal year to $160 millions in 1953 and thereafter.

AS MUCH as $500 million would be authorized for loans through the secondary mortgage market which the bill would establish to purchase GI and FHA mortgages from areas in which private financing is not available to carry them.

One billion dollars of the FHA insurance authority, and 250 millions of the half-billion dollar National Home Mortgage Corp. loan authority would become available only with the approval of the President.

As Taft prepared to fight for enactment of his bill, he said he agreed with Acting Federal Reserve Chairman Marriner S. Eccles that its FHA loan provisions are "too liberal."

Eccles, appearing before Taft's congressional economic committee challenged the whole program of insured loans for home building in a period of scarcity of manpower and materials. Eccles said the loan insurance would provide no additional homes.

Taft disputed that assertion. He declared that the bill's loan provisions will stimulate home building because "the bottlenecks have been broken" in the housing field.

TAFT CONCEDED, however, that he considers the guarantees—particularly that of 90 percent to builders—as "too liberal."

He said that "overwhelming forces" increased the insurance on contractors' loans in his original bill from 85 to 90 percent.

He said he does not plan to offer an amendment to cut back the insurance coverage but indicated he would support such a move if one is made.

Buyers who occupy the homes are eligible to mortgage insurance up to 95 percent of their property if the value does not exceed $6,000, and 90 percent on more costly houses.

Cleveland and Route 762 was shut off to traffic north of Circleville between Routes 23 and 104. None of the county's bridges was damaged by the flood waters, officials stated.

Total rainfall which was measured from 9:30 a. m. Sunday until 8 a. m. Wednesday was set at 3.91 inches. The Scioto river continued to rise during the night at two inches per hour causing the waters to rise from Tuesday's level of 16.5 feet to 19.1 feet Wednesday.

Carter commented, "Looks like we'll get out of this flood easier than we expected."

He said observers in Columbus were watching the Scioto slowly recede which will affect this area by Wednesday night.

John Rolfe, general field representative of the American Red Cross, who is assigned to disaster service, spent Tuesday night in Circleville enroute from the Danville, Ind., tornado to the Portsmouth flood area.

was not in conformity with the rules of criminal procedure.

Government was prepared to argue the point but Judge Goldsborough said he did not want to hear any argument. The jurist quickly told Hopkins "your motion is overruled."

Morison then proceeded with the government's case against Lewis.

The UMW president faces a possible huge fine and jail sentence for failing to call off the 29-day strike of 400,000 miners for a full week after a court order directing its termination "forthwith."

Lewis signaled the men back to work two days ago, after getting an agreement on a $100-a-month pension plan, but less than half the miners responded.

The attitude in the mining areas is to "wait and see" what happens to the union leader in his second appearance before Judge Goldsborough in 18 months for defiance of an anti-strike injunction.

The jurist fined Lewis and the UMW $3,510,000 in 1946, but the supreme court ultimately cut the penalty to $710,000.

Despite the spotty resumption of production, the government lifted restrictions which had been imposed on coal-burning rail traffic to save fuel.

THE MONTH-LONG walkout cost the country approximately 40 million tons of coal; the miners upward of $100 million in wages, and the mine owners and railroads millions of dollars in revenue.

And Lewis now risks another judgment from the court that he should have obeyed the anti-strike order when it was served on him April 5 and then challenged its legality. This was the substance of the courts' 1946 rulings.

Judge Goldsborough already has rejected the union's contention that the back-to-work instructions sent out from UMW headquarters on April 12 purged Lewis of contempt.

N&W To Resume Normal Travel

The Powhatan Arrow and all other Norfolk and Western passenger trains which were discontinued March 21 because of government restrictions due to the coal stoppage, will be returned to service Friday, railway officials announced Wednesday.

The Office of Defense Transportation order, which caused a 25 percent cut in coal burning passenger locomotive mileage, came just two days before a second 25 percent cut was to go into effect.

Freight train mileage which has been cut 25 percent will be back to normal by Thursday, officials said.

Youth Is Bound To Grand Jury

Emerson Cain, 19, of Pickaway Township, pleaded guilty of grand larceny Tuesday afternoon before Magistrate H. O. Cleveland and was bound to Pickaway County grand jury under $1,000 bond.

The youth was accused of stealing a watch valued at $50, a wallet containing $35, five silver dollars, six dollars in cash, a sack of old coins and a box of socket wrenches.

Cain denied having taken the wrenches, court attaches said.

Sheriff Charles Radcliff arrested Cain Sunday evening for allegedly breaking into the Edward Kreisel farm residence. Authorities said Cain's father was a tenant farmer on Kreisel's farm.

The house was reportedly entered last Thursday and Saturday.

Allies Shelving Bizonal Plan

LONDON, April 14—Reports from Berlin indicate today that the United States and Britain have temporarily shelved plans for a provisional government for the Anglo-American zone of Germany.

These reports say that as an alternate plan, Britain and the U. S. favor the extension of political powers to German bizonal economic bodies.

Anglo-American circles are reported willing to form a provisional government for a merged three-power zone, which would include the French sector of the Reich.

Truce Plan Under Eye Of UN Panel

3-Point Program Being Probed

LAKE SUCCESS, April 14—A tentative United Nations truce formula for Palestine is expected to be approved at an informal and closed session today of the 11 Security Council members.

The three main points under consideration as advanced by the United States are:

- 1.—Immediate steps to arrange a cease-fire situation between the Jews and Arabs.
- 2.—Approval of the on-the-spot commission suggested originally by Canada to supervise the truce.
- 3.—Achievement of a general political and military "standstill" situation in Palestine during the forthcoming special assembly's search for a temporary solution.

AN AGREEMENT on the truce formula among the council delegates will be followed by its formal presentation in open session of the Security Council tomorrow morning.

Indications are that the 11-nation body will quickly and unanimously adopt the truce resolution, which will then be offered to the representatives of the Jewish Agency and the Arab Higher Committee.

Neither the Jews nor Arabs show inclination to yield ground in their conflicting standpoints to offer solid hope for a halt to the Holy Land violence and bloodshed through UN intervention by edict.

The gloomy outlook for the Holy Land and United Nations chances of scoring a temporary solution or truce is shared by the Palestine Commission, which has issued its special report to the General Assembly.

Official Scorns Rent Practice

CLEVELAND, April 14—Landlords "who demand or accept cash gratuities as a prerequisite for renting" were in for a tongue-lashing last night in Cleveland from Laurence J. Efferth, secretary of the apartment house owners association.

Efferth told a meeting of the organization that such malpractice is not only unfair and dishonest, but also injurious to all property owners. He declared that all complaints of such practices would be forwarded to the office of the housing expediter for court action.

Efferth added that although landlords are "unalterably opposed" to rent control in any form, some are perpetuating controls indefinitely by underhanded dealings.

Kathryn Hott, Circleville, were Sunday guests of Mrs. Ellen Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. William Gardner, Dayton, visited Mr. and Mrs. William Neff and family, Saturday.

College Students Use Own Hands To Build Dorm

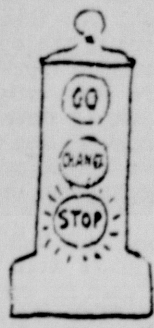

WILMINGTON, April 14—If you want something done, do it yourself.

That old adage was put to good use today by 600 Wilmington college students who need a new men's dormitory. They pledged the labor themselves and started out to begin construction of the new dorm which will hold 75 men.

The students also were following the example set 75 years ago when the college's first student body built much of the original college building. Both men and women students "pitched in" to dig foundation trenches, mix cement, lay block and brick, do finishing and painting. Architects planned the construction as simply as possible in order that unskilled student labor may do a good job.

Dr. Samuel D. Marble, 32-year-old Wilmington college president, hailed the spirit of cooperation, the enthusiasm and the willingness of the students to give their time in the construction work.

THE LINCOLN SECRETS

WHY were the recently opened Lincoln papers in the Library of Congress kept secret for 21 years after the death of Lincoln's son Robert? This condition, laid down by the younger Lincoln, has caused much speculation as to sensational disclosures that the papers might contain. The most piquant was the story that they would reveal that one of Lincoln's own cabinet had been a traitor. Secretary of War Stanton was often named in this connection.

Such a suggestion was preposterous. Lincoln would be the last person to countenance a traitor in his official family, certainly not in the vital War Department. Helen D. Bullock of the Library of Congress supplies a better answer.

Writing in the "Library of Congress Quarterly," she says that conditions of secrecy for a period of years are not unusual in gifts of private papers. The Library has several other collections whose use is forbidden. She also justifies this prohibition by explaining that some of Lincoln's correspondents made unjustified charges against notable men. Thus Gen. John A. McClernand told Lincoln that Grant had just been "gloriously drunk and unfit for duty." And Grant himself, reporting on Gen. Napoleon B. Buford, a skilful operator against guerrillas in Arkansas, said that "Buford would scarcely make a respectable hospital nurse if put in petticoats," and that he was unfit for any other military duty.

Such peevish charges, coming from overwork and sometimes personal quarrels, could well wait for 21 years or more before being revealed.

KOUSSEVITZKY

MUSIC lovers will contemplate with sadness the decision of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky to lay down the baton of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Because he brought the Boston orchestra to prominence in the period when radio and recording were developing their ability to spread the sound of a single orchestra to all the corners of the land, followers of fine music throughout America have come to know the name and the musical touch of Koussevitzky.

There is no logical reason why Russia and America should not get along together amicably in a large world. We find it is hard to tell Russians anything, but equally hard to understand what Russia tells us.

It takes an awful lot of people to run this country, some of whom are really useful.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

Some time ago, some gossip columnists were busy marrying off Herbert Hoover. For a while it was amusing, but soon it became a bore, particularly as their stories began to point to specific persons. Of course, there never was any truth in the accounts and such speculation on private matters is disgraceful.

Now, for two weeks, on the radio, Walter Winchell has referred to Herbert Hoover's ill health. Fortunately for Mr. Hoover, he has recovered from a case of shingles, which was publicly announced at the end of last Summer when it hit him, after his long trips by airplane to Europe, Asia and South America. The shingles were unpleasant and for a time Mr. Hoover found it difficult to use his right arm, which had been affected. That was months ago, although Winchell just heard about it.

As I have seen Mr. Hoover often during the period of illness, convalescence and recovery, I can speak of it. Even while he was troubled by the shingles, Mr. Hoover delivered three addresses to one of which he was accompanied not by a physician as was reported but by former Ambassador Hugh Gibson.

The addresses, during that period, were to the Holland Society, the Sons of the Revolution and at the Madison Square Garden. He also went fishing off Florida and caught some fish. He conducted the meetings of the Commission on the Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government every month from Sept. 29 until three weeks ago. The next meeting is scheduled for the beginning of next week and Mr. Hoover expects to be there. All these meetings were held in Washington and some of them have been hectic. Mr. Hoover lives in New York and has publicly traveled to Washington and back.

Mr. Hoover devotes himself to voluminous writing, for publication and for safe-keeping. He does all his writing in long-hand, using a lead pencil. Nobody ever ghost-writes Mr. Hoover's speeches or articles and although I have come across some liars and boasters who have claimed that honor, the story is never true. He uses his right hand for such purposes.

At any rate, I have been with Mr. Hoover often during the past year. I have read some of the manuscripts. In a word, the shingles did not permanently injure Mr. Hoover's right arm. In fact, recently when I dined with him, I insisted upon shaking his right hand for the fun of it and perhaps as a protest against the tales that were passing currency in New York's expensive saloons and vulgar bistros.

I am sure that Winchell is solicitous of the ex-President's health and that he wishes him well, and that Mr. Hoover is grateful for the solicitude, which comes months too late. Each time Winchell shows his deep concern, thousands of friends telephone and send messages of good cheer. It would have been simpler for Winchell to telephone to Mr. Hoover or even to consult the editor and publisher of his newspaper, The New York Mirror, who have ready access to Mr. Hoover. This is a story which could easily have been confirmed—cost, one nickel. Certainly, it has no news value and no radio value nearly nine months late and fully three months after Mr. Hoover's complete recovery.

CHAPTER ONE

THE CABLEGRAM came after Anne got home from the office. She read it once, then she read it again, then she sat looking at it in her hand.

"For weeks no letter," she thought, "and now this." She walked to the open window and stood staring blindly down at New York's busy streets. This meant she would have to decide, she was thinking. She would have to make up her mind whether Alice or her independence meant more to her.

She turned and looked back at the room. These were her things, bought and paid for by money she had earned. The big, blue wing chair, the comfortable day bed, the gate-leg maple table, her little collection of Venetian glass twinkling in the light of the old Chinese lamp, the Oriental scatter rugs—everything. Her independence had bought them. Her willingness to work for her freedom. Yet every time she came home to them, the little core of loneliness at the center of her heart began to ache again. For independence was not what she asked of life. Not any longer. It was too hollow, too empty, too unrewarding a thing.

The telephone rang and she moved to answer it. A familiar voice said, "Anne?" "Oh, hello, Don."

"What about dinner tonight?" She hesitated, then, "All right. I'll be ready in half an hour. Is that all right for you?" "Fine."

"See you!" She hung up and sat for a moment, her thoughts turned to Don. She was sorry for him. She liked him, too. He had rescued her from many long, dull evenings this past half year. They were good friends. But that was all they were and because he seemed to be getting other ideas lately she had first turned down his invitation for tonight. She was glad now, that he didn't give up easily. Talking with him might clarify her ideas, help make up her mind what to do about Alice.

She carried the cablegram into her bedroom and laid it on her bureau while she considered what she would wear. It was an August night and hot. Her sheer black was the thing. She would put on the narrow, green jeweled belt with it and her green slippers and earrings. Don liked her in black. He never noticed it was the same old dress if she changed her accessories.

She was ready five minutes ahead of time and opened the door to him before he could ring.

"Hi!" she said gaily. Don liked her to be gay. To take nothing seriously. Then you didn't get hurt, he said. His was a wry and twisted philosophy, she thought.

"Hi yourself, Beautiful!" He came in wearing his Palm Beach suit and stood looking down at her. She was easy to look at. The natural wave of her shoulder-length hair had coppery lights. Her golden-brown eyes, wide-spaced and fearless, were warmly alive. Her smile was quick and friendly, while the tiny sprinkling of freckles across the bridge of her nose seemed only to make her skin creamier.

He said, "To what do I owe your change of heart?"

"Change of mind," she corrected

gently but firmly. "My heart is unchanged."

"Must you be so exact? Couldn't you let me entertain fond hopes through at least one cocktail?" She laughed. "You shall never say I misled you."

If only you would! Just once. Donald Ogden was tall and broad, so broad that he stooped a little as if the weight of his big shoulders were almost too much for him. His face was long and somber, and he carried a scar down one cheek from the war. He carried a lot of other scars from the war, too. Invisible ones. But what they had done to him was clear in his tired, disbelieving eyes and the weary cynicism of his speech. He put faith in nothing. Not God or the devil or any man or woman. He was twenty-five.

He slumped in the wing chair and sipped the drink Alice had given him and thought about her. He didn't know why he bothered with her. She was too young for him. Not so much in years as in her viewpoint. She was too idealistic or honest or something. Yet that was probably what drew him to her. He felt that he had to make her know it was no good being like that. That you had to take life and just tear from it, quickly and ruthlessly, whatever you desired and not mind what happened afterward. He wanted, almost savagely, to educate her to that knowledge. He felt, in an odd, confused way, that only by doing so could he save her. She would be saved because she would be lost. And if they were lost together, the world might be bearable once more. He didn't know, but he thought so. And maybe that was love and maybe it wasn't. He didn't know that, either. But, again, he thought so.

He said, his tired eyes on her, "I see excitement blooming like a Roman candle within you. Is Alice coming home at last?" She nodded. "He cabled from Honolulu."

"So what?" "I don't know. I mean, I'm not sure. I thought— Well, I thought I'd like to talk about it with you."

"You want me for a sounding board?" She nodded again. "If you don't mind?"

"She loves him. She loves him, she'll talk it over with her old friend, Don, and find out. Good old Don!" He looked at her, his lids drooping. "I'm hurt."

"You don't get hurt, you told me."

"That's right. I don't get hurt. Well, shall we go?" He took her to a roof garden. It was exclusive and expensive but Don had plenty of money. Anne wasn't sure just what his job was. She only knew he was somehow connected with motion pictures. Anyway, he spent generously, without ostentation, as if he had always had plenty of funds and always would have. Not that it would matter much to him if he hadn't, she thought, trailing the headwater to a reserved table. She could see Don a beachcomber as well as a man about town. In a way, he had already become one because, mentally, he had discarded the world and everything in it.

She let him order for her. He did so knowingly but with that air of utter indifference from which he was never free. When the waiter had gone she spoke impulsively out of the compassion that was a part of her.

"Don, you trouble me." "My sweet, you waste your time."

"I can't help it. You don't seem to have anything. I wish you could have something! Something to live by. To give you a reason for working. I mean."

"I have a reason for working."

"What is it?" "So I won't starve." He grinned. "You need never worry, you see. It's one of those instincts beyond my control."

She shook her head, her face sober. "You must want something more."

The grin faded. "I do. I want you. I've told you so a dozen times."

She said quickly, "Just another instinct."

"Certainly. What else? And don't kid yourself it's anything more with Alice."

"It is more, Don. You're not being nice."

"You mean he's willing to legalize it. Well, so am I." He leaned toward her across the table. "You don't understand? Let me explain. From being a vague and distant threat, Miss Forester, your unknown Lieutenant Commander Alexander Doremus has suddenly become a real and close menace. I'm pushed to an extreme and all my hitherto tentative suggestions become purposeful and honorable. I may regret it but—"

She waited. His eyes, sunken and tired but lit now with an odd light, looked away for a moment and then came back to her.

"This is my proposition," he said. "I'll marry you any time you say. You keep your apartment. Keep your job if you want to. I don't care! Do what you like. I'm not asking you to live with me. Frankly, I couldn't stand that close a relationship with anyone. Yet I would want a key to your front door and the knowledge that I could use it whenever I liked. In other words, you have everything the way you have it now only without financial worries and with an occasional me. What's more, any time it doesn't work out for either of us, we call it off. Have a cigarette?"

She shook her head. "A divorce, you mean?"

"Yes. Everything legal all the way."

"No," she said slowly. She tried to make it sound kind, the way he had, tried to make his offer sound wonderful. But it wasn't wonderful.

"Why not?" "Because if you start out that way, not believing it's going to last, of course it won't. It— Well, it just isn't my idea of marriage, Don. That's all."

"I see. You cling to the old ball-and-chain business. The hair shirt. The martyr's stake. The life-long devotion no matter if it ends in murderous hatred—"

She said quietly, "That's it. That's what I mean. We're too far apart in our thinking. You believe that everything is foredoomed to failure. That there's not enough good in anybody or anything—"

"Try the soup," he interrupted. "There's good in that, anyway." And he gave her his grin again. But the light was dead in his eyes.

Mrs. Emanuel S. Neuding Is Granted Life Membership In OES

Past Patrons, Matrons Honored

More than 100 members of Order of Eastern Star and their guests were present Tuesday evening in the chapter rooms of Masonic temple when a life membership was conferred upon Mrs. E. S. Neuding of East Main street, who has been a past matron of the local order and a member for 50 years.

The evening was dedicated to Mrs. Frank Bolig who is Grand Martha and all past patrons and matrons of the lodge. Each were presented with corsages or boutonnieres.

Impressive initiatory work was conducted by a double corps of honorary officers, including Mrs. Neuding, Homer Reber, worthy patron; Mrs. T. R. Accord, associate matron; Carl D. Bennett, associate patron; Mrs. Bowling, conductress; Mrs. Lawrence J. Johnson, associate conductress; and Mrs. N. E. Reichelderfer, secretary.

Mrs. William B. Cady, treasurer; Mrs. Clifton Mahaffey, Adah; Mrs. Emmett Barnhart, Ruth; Mrs. Carl D. Bennett, Esther; Miss Virginia Marion, Martha; Mrs. Cecil Noecker, Electa; Mrs. Ernest Tolbert, chaplain; Mrs. Harry G. Griner, organist; and Mrs. George K. Fishpaw, marshal.

J. Oscar Ward, worthy patron, and Mrs. Robert Goodchild, worthy matron, presided for the impressive ceremonies.

Among the visiting patrons and matrons from New Holland, Williamsport, Frankfort, Kingston and Lithopolis were William Owen, associate grand patron from Bethel; Mrs. William Owen, grand representative of Florida; Mrs. Elizabeth Orr Bennett, deputy grand matron; and Carl Hohenstein, deputy grand master from Kingston.

Following the business session and prior to the rites, Miss Ann Moeller sang an appropriate selection accompanied by Miss Reba Lee.

Refreshments were served in the Red room from a damask-covered table. Centering the table was a large tiered cake topped by a star and one burning taper. Tall burning candles surrounded by greenery added to the table appointments. Mrs. Neuding presided at the beverage service.

Mrs. Goodchild announced the next meeting would be designated as "men's night." She appointed Joe Brink to serve as chairman. His assistants will be George K. Fishpaw, Sam Morris, Ray P. Reid, W. E. Hilyard, George H. Adkins, Homer Reber and Arthur Sark.

The program for that meeting will be presented by the worthy patrons. The worthy matron also announced the 50th annual inspection to take place May 10.

Ceremony Read In Lancaster Methodist Church

First Methodist church in Lancaster was the setting Sunday afternoon for the wedding of Miss Margaret Lucile Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Clark of that city and Willis Fisher Abbott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Pearl T. Abbott of Amanda.

The Rev. George W. Herd, pastor of the church, read the ceremony at 4:30 p. m. following a program of organ nuptial music played by Miss Betty Lechner. Mr. Clark, father of the bride, sang two selections.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gown in a frock of white satin with a long veil of sheer illusion. She carried an arrangement of gardenias, tied with white satin ribbon.

Mrs. Richard Halderman was matron of honor. Miss Carol Clark and Miss Joyce Clark, sisters of the bride, were bridesmaids. Miss Jeannie Clark served as junior bridesmaid.

Trenton Abbott served as best man for his brother, while the ushers included Richard Clark, and George Clark of Logan, brothers of the bride, Robert Hansley and Robert Claypool.

A reception for 75 guests was arranged to follow the church service, with Mr. and Mrs. Clark entertaining in their home.

Following a wedding trip the couple will establish a home west of Lancaster.

The new Mrs. Abbott was graduated by Lancaster high school and attended Lancaster business college. Mr. Abbott was graduated by Amanda high school and is engaged in agriculture work.

Matilda Jean Goode Weds Richard F. Roundhouse

Impressive in its simplicity was the nuptial high mass double ring ceremony read by the Rev. Father Edward J. Reidy at 8 a. m. Wednesday in St. Joseph's Catholic church uniting Miss Matilda Jean Goode and Richard F. Roundhouse in marriage.

The former Miss Goode is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Goode of Washington Township, while her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Roundhouse of West High street, Circleville.

The three candle-lit altars were adorned in greenery, pink snapdragons and white double feverfew.

Escorted by her father, the bride approached the altar in a floor length white taffeta gown designed with puff sleeves and a V-neckline. Her fingertip veil of illusion was held in place with a tiara of pearlized orange blossoms.

She carried a white prayer book topped by an orchid and wore a strand of pearls. Both were gifts from the bridegroom.

Miss Ruth Goode attended her sister in a poudre-blue embroidered taffeta gown. She carried an arm bouquet of American Beauty roses and wore a tiara corresponding to her gown.

Fred Roundhouse was best man for his son. Raymond, Gerald, David and Jack Goode served as acolytes.

Miss Eleanor Snyder, accompanied by Mrs. George Groom, organist, sang, "On This Day, O Beautiful Mother" as the couple knelt before the altar. Miss Snyder sang Rosewieg's "Ave Maria" and "Mother, At Your Feet Is Kneeling" at the close of the ceremony.

The meeting of Willing Workers Class of Pontious Evangelical United Brethren church has been postponed until May 20.

THE LINCOLN SECRETS

WHY were the recently opened Lincoln papers in the Library of Congress kept secret for 21 years after the death of Lincoln's son Robert? This condition, laid down by the younger Lincoln, has caused much speculation as to sensational disclosures that the papers might contain. The most piquant was the story that they would reveal that one of Lincoln's own cabinet had been a traitor. Secretary of War Stanton was oftenest named in this connection.

Such a suggestion was preposterous. Lincoln would be the last person to countenance a traitor in his official family, certainly not in the vital War Department. Helen D. Bullock of the Library of Congress supplies a better answer.

Writing in the "Library of Congress Quarterly," she says that conditions of secrecy for a period of years are not unusual in gifts of private papers. The Library has several other collections whose use is forbidden. She also justifies this prohibition by explaining that some of Lincoln's correspondents made unjustified charges against notable men. Thus Gen. John A. McClernand told Lincoln that Grant had just been "gloriously drunk and unfit for duty." And Grant himself, reporting on Gen. Napoleon B. Buford, a skilful operator against guerillas in Arkansas, said that "Buford would scarcely make a respectable hospital nurse if put in petticoats," and that he was unfit for any other military duty.

Such peevish charges, coming from overwork and sometimes personal quarrels, could well wait for 21 years or more before being revealed.

KOUSSEVITZKY

MUSIC lovers will contemplate with sadness the decision of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky to lay down the baton of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Because he brought the Boston orchestra to prominence in the period when radio and recording were developing their ability to spread the sound of a single orchestra to all the corners of the land, followers of fine music throughout America have come to know the name and the musical touch of Koussevitzky.

There is no logical reason why Russia and America should not get along together amicably in a large world. We find it is hard to tell Russians anything, but equally hard to understand what Russia tells us.

It takes an awful lot of people to run this country, some of whom are really useful.

These Days

Some time ago, some gossip columnists were busy marrying off Herbert Hoover. For a while it was amusing, but soon it became a bore, particularly as their stories began to point to specific persons. Of course, there never was any truth in the accounts and such speculation on private matters is disgraceful.

Now, for two weeks, on the radio, Walter Winchell has referred to Herbert Hoover's ill health. Fortunately for Mr. Hoover, he has recovered from a case of shingles, which was publicly announced at the end of last Summer when it hit him, after his long trips by airplane to Europe, Asia and South America. The shingles were unpleasant and for a time Mr. Hoover found it difficult to use his right arm, which had been affected. That was months ago, although Winchell just heard about it.

As I have seen Mr. Hoover often during the period of illness, convalescence and recovery, I can speak of it. Even while he was troubled by the shingles, Mr. Hoover delivered three addresses to one of which he was accompanied not by a physician as was reported but by former Ambassador Hugh Gibson.

The addresses, during that period, were to the Holland Society, the Sons of the Revolution and at the Madison Square Garden. He also went fishing off Florida and caught some fish. He conducted the meetings of the Commission on the Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government every month from Sept. 29 until three weeks ago. The next meeting is scheduled for the beginning of next week and Mr. Hoover expects to be there. All these meetings were held in Washington and some of them have been hectic. Mr. Hoover lives in New York and has publicly traveled to Washington and back.

Mr. Hoover devotes himself to voluminous writing, for publication and for safekeeping. He does all his writing in long-hand, using a lead pencil. Nobody ever ghost-writes Mr. Hoover's speeches or articles and although I have come across some liars and boasters who have claimed that honor, the story is never true. He uses his right hand for such purposes.

At any rate, I have been with Mr. Hoover often during the past year. I have read some of the manuscripts. In a word, the shingles did not permanently injure Mr. Hoover's right arm. In fact, recently when I dined with him, I insisted upon shaking his right hand for the fun of it and perhaps as a protest against the tales that were passing currency in New York's expensive saloons and vulgar bistros.

I am sure that Winchell is solicitous of the ex-President's health and that he wishes him well, and that Mr. Hoover is grateful for the solicitude, which comes months too late. Each time Winchell shows his deep concern, thousands of friends telephone and send messages of good cheer. It would have been simpler for Winchell to telephone to Mr. Hoover or even to consult the editor and publisher of his newspaper, The New York Mirror, who have ready access to Mr. Hoover. This is a story which could easily have been confirmed—cost, one nickel. Certainly, it has no news value and no radio value nearly nine months late and fully three months after Mr. Hoover's complete recovery.

CHAPTER ONE

THE CABLEGRAM came after Anne got home from the office. She read it once, then she read it again, then she sat looking at it in her hand.

"For weeks no letter," she thought, "and now this." She walked to the open window and stood staring blindly down at New York's busy streets. This meant she would have to decide, she was thinking. She would have to make up her mind whether Alec or her independence meant more to her.

She turned and looked back at the room. These were her things, bought and paid for by money she had earned. The big, blue wing chair, the comfortable day bed, the gate-leg maple table, her little collection of Venetian glass twinkling in the light of the old Chinese lamp, the Oriental scatter rugs—everything. Her independence had bought them. Her willingness to work. Her freedom. Yet every time she came home to them the little core of cold loneliness at the center of her heart began to ache again. For independence was not what she asked of life. Not any longer. It was too hollow, too empty, too unrewarding a thing.

The telephone rang and she moved to answer it. A familiar voice said, "Anne?"

"Oh, hello, Don." "What about dinner tonight?" She hesitated, then, "All right. I'll be ready in half an hour. Is that all right for you?"

"Fine." "See you!"

She hung up and sat for a moment, her thoughts turned to Don. She was sorry for him. She liked him, too. He had rescued her from many long, dull evenings this past half year. They were good friends. But that was all they were and because she seemed to be getting other ideas lately she had first turned down his invitation for tonight. She was glad, now, that he didn't give up easily. Talking with him might clarify her ideas, help make up her mind what to do about Alec.

She carried the cablegram into her bedroom and laid it on her bureau while she considered what she would wear. It was an August night and hot. Her sheer black was the thing. She would put on the narrow, green jeweled belt with it and her green slippers and earrings. Don liked her in black. He never noticed it was the same old dress if she changed her accessories.

She was ready five minutes ahead of time and opened the door to him before he could ring.

"Hi!" she said gaily. Don liked her to be gay. To take nothing seriously. Then you didn't get hurt, he said. This was a wry and twisted philosophy, she thought.

"Hi yourself, beautiful." He came in wearing his Palm Beach suit and stood looking down at her. She was easy to look at. The natural wave of her shoulder-length hair had coppery lights. Her golden-brown eyes, wide-spaced and fearless, were warmly alive. Her smile was quick and friendly, while the tiny sprinkling of freckles across the bridge of her nose seemed only to make her skin creamier.

He said, "To what do I owe your change of heart?" "Change of mind," she corrected

gently but firmly. "My heart is unchanged."

"Must you be so exact? Couldn't you let me entertain fond hopes through at least one cocktail?" She laughed. "You shall never say I misled you."

"If only you would! Just once." Donald Ogden was tall and broad, so broad that he stooped a little as if the weight of his big shoulders were almost too much for him. His face was long and somber, and he carried a scar down one cheek from the war. He carried a lot of other scars from the war, too. Invisible ones. But what they had done to him was clear in his tired, disbelieving eyes and the weary cynicism of his speech. He put faith in nothing. Not God or the devil or any man or woman. He was twenty-five.

He slumped in the wing chair and sipped the drink Anne had given him and thought about her. He didn't know why he bothered with her. She was too young for him. Not so much in years as in her viewpoint. She was too idealistic or honest or something. Yet that was probably what drew him to her. He felt that he had to make her know it was no good being like that. That you had to take life and just tear from it, you desired and not mind what happened afterward. He wanted, almost savagely, to educate her to that knowledge. He felt, in an odd, confused way, that only by doing so could he save her. She would be saved because she would be lost. And if they were lost together, the world might be bearable once more. He didn't know, but he thought so. And maybe that's why he thought it wasn't. He didn't know that, either. But, again, he thought so.

He said, his tired eyes on her. "I see excitement blooming like a Roman candle within you. Is Alec coming home at last?"

She nodded. "He cabled from Honolulu."

"So what?"

"I don't know. I mean, I'm not sure. I thought— Well, I thought I'd like to talk about it with you."

"You want me for a sounding board?"

She nodded again. "If you don't mind?"

"She loves him. She loves him not. She'll talk it over with her old friend, Don, and find out. Good old Don!" He looked at her, his lids drooping. "I'm hurt."

"You don't get hurt, you told me."

"That's right. I don't get hurt. Well, shall we go?"

He took her to a roof garden. It was exclusive and expensive but Don had plenty of money. Anne wasn't sure just what his job was. She only knew he was somehow connected with motion pictures. Anyway, he spent generously, without ostentation, as if he had always had plenty of funds and always would have. Not that it would matter much to him if he hadn't, she thought, trailing the headwater to a reserved table. She could see Don a beachcomber as well as a man about town. In a way, he had already become one because, mentally, he had discarded the world and everything in it.

She let him order for her. He did so knowingly but with that air of utter indifference from which he was never free. When the waiter had gone she spoke impulsively out of the compassion that was a part of her.

"Don, you trouble me."

"My sweet, you waste your time."

"I can't help it. You don't seem to have anything. I wish you could have something! Something to live by. To give you a reason for working, I mean."

"I have a reason for working."

"What is it?"

"So I won't starve." He grinned. "You need never worry, you see. It's one of those instincts beyond my control."

She shook her head, her face sober. "You must want something more."

The grin faded. "I do. I want you. I've told you so a dozen times."

She said quickly, "Just another instant."

"Certainly. What else? And don't kid yourself it's anything more with Alec."

"It is more, Don. You're not being nice."

"You mean he's willing to legalize it. Well, so am I." He leaned toward her across the table. "You don't understand? Let me explain. From being a vague and distant threat, Miss Forester, your unkindly and ruthlessly, whatever you desired and not mind what happened afterward. I'm pushed to an extreme and all my hitherto tentative suggestions become purposeful—and honorable. I may regret it but—"

She waited. His eyes, sunken and tired but lit now with an odd light, looked away for a moment and then came back to her.

"This is my proposition," he said. "I'll marry you any time you say. You keep your apartment. Keep your job if you want to. I don't care! Do what you like. I'm not asking you to live with me. Frankly, I couldn't stand that close a relationship with anyone. Yet I would want a key to your front door and the knowledge that I could use it whenever I liked. In other words, you have everything the way you have it now only without financial worries and with an occasional me. What's more, any time it doesn't work out for either of us, we call it off. Have a cigarette?"

She shook her head. "A divorce, you mean?"

"Yes. Everything legal all the way."

"No," she said slowly. She tried to make it sound kind, the way he had tried to make his offer sound wonderful. But it wasn't wonderful.

"Why not?"

"Because if you start out that way, not believing it's going to last, of course it won't. It— Well, it just isn't my idea of marriage. Don, that's all."

"I see. You cling to the old ball-and-chain business. The hair shirt. The martyr's stake. The life-long devotion no matter if it ends in murderous hatred—"

She said quietly, "That's it. That's what I mean. We're too far apart in our thinking. You believe that everything is foredoomed to failure. That there's not enough good in anybody or anything—"

"Try the soup," he interrupted. "There's good in that, anyway."

And he gave her his grin again. But the light was dead in her eyes.

Mrs. Emanuel S. Neuding Is Granted Life Membership In OES

Past Patrons, Matrons Honored

More than 100 members of Order of Eastern Star and their guests were present Tuesday evening in the chapter rooms of Masonic temple when a life membership was conferred upon Mrs. E. S. Neuding of East Main street, who has been a past matron of the local order and a member for 50 years.

The evening was dedicated to Mrs. Frank Bolig who is Grand Martha and all past patrons and matrons of the lodge. Each were presented with corsages or boutonnieres.

Impressive initiatory work was conducted by a double corps of honorary officers, including Mrs. Neuding, Homer Reber, worthy patron; Mrs. T. R. Acord, associate matron; Carl D. Bennett, associate patron; Mrs. Bowling, conductress; Mrs. Lawrence J. Johnson, associate conductress; and Mrs. N. E. Reichelderfer, secretary.

Mrs. William B. Cady, treasurer; Mrs. Clifton Mahaffey, Adah; Mrs. Emmett Barnhart, Ruth; Mrs. Carl D. Bennett, Esther; Miss Virginia Marion, Martha; Mrs. Cecil Noecker, Electa; Mrs. Ernest Tolbert, chaplain; Mrs. Harry G. Griner, organist; and Mrs. George K. Fishpaw, marshal.

J. Oscar Ward, worthy patron, and Mrs. Robert Goodchild, worthy matron, presided for the impressive ceremonies.

Among the visiting patrons and matrons from New Holland, Williamsport, Frankfort, Kingston and Lithopolis were William Owen, associate grand patron from Bethel; Mrs. William Owen, grand representative of Florida; Mrs. Elizabeth Orr Bennett, deputy grand matron; and Carl Hohenstein, deputy grand master from Kingston.

Following the business session and prior to the rites, Miss Ann Moeller sang an appropriate selection accompanied by Miss Reba Lee.

Refreshments were served in the Red room from a damask-covered table. Centering the table was a large tiered cake topped by a star and one burning taper. Tall burning candles surrounded by greenery added to the table appointments. Mrs. Neuding presided at the beverage service.

Mrs. Goodchild announced the next meeting would be designated as "men's night." She appointed Joe Brink to serve as chairman. His assistants will be George K. Fishpaw, Sam Morris, Ray P. Reid, W. E. Hilyard, George H. Adkins, Homer Reber and Arthur Sark.

The program for that meeting will be presented by the worthy patrons. The worthy matron also announced the 50th annual inspection to take place May 10.

Pickaway Class Books Play

Ceremony Read In Lancaster Methodist Church

First Methodist church in Lancaster was the setting Sunday afternoon for the wedding of Miss Margaret Lucile Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Clark of that city and Willis Fisher Abbott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Pearl T. Abbott of Amanda.

The Rev. George W. Herd, pastor of the church, read the ceremony at 4:30 p. m. following a program of organ nuptial music played by Miss Betty Lechner. Mr. Clark, father of the bride, sang two selections.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gownned in a frock of white satin with a long veil of sheer illusion. She carried an arrangement of gardenias, tied with white satin ribbon.

Mrs. Richard Halderman was matron of honor. Miss Carol Clark and Miss Joyce Clark, sisters of the bride, were bridesmaids. Miss Jeannie Clark served as junior bridesmaid.

Trenton Abbott served as best man for his brother, while the ushers included Richard Clark, and George Clark of Logan, brothers of the bride, Robert Hansley and Robert Claypool.

A reception for 75 guests was arranged to follow the church service, with Mr. and Mrs. Clark entertaining in their home.

Following a wedding trip the couple will establish a home west of Lancaster.

The new Mrs. Abbott was graduated by Lancaster high school and attended Lancaster business college. Mr. Abbott was graduated by Amanda high school and is engaged in agriculture work.

Matilda Jean Goode Weds Richard F. Roundhouse

Impressive in its simplicity was the nuptial high mass double ring ceremony read by the Rev. Father Edward J. Reidy at 8 a. m. Wednesday in St. Joseph's Catholic church uniting Miss Matilda Jean Goode and Richard F. Roundhouse in marriage.

The former Miss Goode is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Goode of Washington Township, while her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Roundhouse of West High street, Circleville.

The three candle-lit altars were adorned in greenery, pink snapdragons and white double feverfew.

Escorted by her father, the bride approached the altar in a floor length white taffeta gown designed with puff sleeves and a V-neckline. Her fingertip veil of illusion was held in place with a tiara of pearlized orange blossoms.

She carried a white prayer book topped by an orchid and wore a strand of pearls. Both were gifts from the bridegroom.

Miss Ruth Goode attended her sister in a powder-blue embroidered taffeta gown. She carried an arm bouquet of American Beauty roses and wore a tiara corresponding to her gown.

Fred Roundhouse was best man for his son. Raymond, Gerald, David and Jack Goode served as acolytes.

Miss Eleanor Snyder, accompanied by Mrs. George Groom, organist, sang, "On This Day, O Beautiful Mother" as the couple knelt before the altar. Miss Snyder sang Rosewieg's "Ave Maria" and "Mother, At Your Feet Is Kneeling" at the close of the ceremony.

Mrs. J. A. Herbst Honored By Church Groups

Thirty-five members of the Missionary and Ladies Aid Societies of Calvary Evangelical United Brethren church and their guests gathered Tuesday evening with Mrs. Talmer Wise, East Franklin street, for their April meeting.

After a business meeting presided over by Miss Goldy Noggle and Mrs. Manley Carothers, the group was invited to the dining-room where the guest of honor, Mrs. James A. Herbst, was seated at a decorated table to open gifts arranged by the group for a stork shower.

The evening was spent in arranging a family album of the Rev. and Mrs. Herbst of South Washington street. Lunch was served by Mrs. Wise assisted by Mrs. Carothers.

Mrs. H. H. Snyder of Kingsport left Wednesday for a visit with her son-in-law and daughter, Capt. and Mrs. Fred Z. Gearhart and daughter in their home located on the Fort Benning Air Base post, near Columbus Ga.

The meeting of Willing Workers Class of Pontious Evangelical United Brethren church has been postponed until May 20.

Betrothal Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Poppler of Columbus have announced the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Ruth Evelyn, to Robert Edward Griesheimer Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Edward Griesheimer of East High street.

The bride-elect was graduated by Central evening school and attended Ohio State university.

Mr. Griesheimer was graduated by Circleville high school, attended Ohio State, and is a student at American Television School of America in Chicago. The open church ceremony will take place June 12 in First English Lutheran church, Columbus.

Britain Set To Spend For Arms

$2.9 Billion Budget Already Voted

LONDON, April 14 — Britain will spend $2.9 billion on the navy, army, and air force this year and $28,000,000 has been allotted for civil defense.

These are impressive figures for a country of England's size and population, and they accurately reflect British awareness of the danger of war.

This might be described as a national feeling that, although an actual "shooting war" may be remote, the possibility of such a conflagration seems to increase daily.

The war feeling in Britain today is surprisingly similar to that of Poland in 1939.

The Poles then felt they were victims of their own geographical position—caught in the middle between the two giants, Germany and Russia.

The British today complain that they are caught between America and Russia.

IT SHOULD be emphasized that the sympathies of practically all Britons except the Communists were with the United States in the event of a Soviet-American conflict.

The most significant parallel between the Britain of 1939 and the Britain of 1948 is the use made of "fifth column" methods—the Trojan Horse or "enemy within the gates" strategy.

It is noteworthy that England, of all European countries, is particularly vulnerable to this form of attack because of the veneration in which human rights and liberties are held.

Even a year ago, the average British trade unionist did not fully appreciate that the Communists are not an ordinary political party but a group owing allegiance to a foreign power.

Czechoslovakia eradicated all remaining illusions, but it also contributed to the growing war fears. The public has fatalistically accepted the ultimate implications of attempting to halt Stalinist expansionism.

Scotland Yard and MIS (military intelligence) have been ordered to keep stricter watch on subversive elements, and it is now planned to place increasing numbers of special branch officers in factories where Communists are active.

IT IS KNOWN that the Communist party is extending its drive to gain control of shop stewards' committees in factories, especially in those shops where they cannot openly win key positions in the trade unions.

According to official Communist figures, three months ago there were 250 Communist-controlled factory committees, and there were two or more party members on the committees of 550 other factories.

It was announced that the target was control of 800 factories, and this goal has recently been raised.

Fire Sweeps Wyoming Town

LARAMIE, Wyo., April 14—The central business district of Laramie sustained fire damage estimated at more than one million dollars early today.

Flames, swept by a 45-mile-an-hour wind, destroyed all but one structure in one downtown city block and gutted buildings in half another block.

Laramie Fire Chief Blake Fanning said the blaze, which started shortly before 2 a. m., destroyed 30 business firms and 45 autos.

No casualties were reported. Firemen from Cheyenne, 52 miles away, assisted regular and volunteer Laramie fire fighters.

Cleveland Dads Asks Protection

CLEVELAND, April 14—Cleveland's police department and the city administration were under the fire today of city council, angered by a recent upsurge in brutal attacks on women.

Legislators demanded police protection for women and also men who have occasion to be on the city streets after dark.

Stressing the fact that Cleveland hasn't seen a foot patrolman for two years, Councilman Harry T. Marshall demanded that more policemen be assigned to foot patrol.

About 233 Seniors To Be Graduated Here This Year

27 Walnut Pupils Pace County List

56 Circleville Diplomas Readied

It is estimated that 233 Pickaway County young men and women from the various high schools will receive their parchments during the coming Spring commencement exercises.

According to school men, 56 Circleville high school seniors are to be graduated June 3. School spokesmen said that commencement exercise details have not yet been completed, however.

In the county schools, the number of students from each school and their tentative programs, along with the graduation dates, follow:

Ashville is to graduate about 17 students May 19 in the school auditorium. Ben Darrow, formerly affiliated with the "School of the Air" broadcast for the state department of education, is to be the speaker.

DARBY WILL graduate about four students in their exercises May 20. Speaker for the program is to be Irwin Johnson, Columbus radio personality.

Deercreek is to graduate nearly 13 of its students May 12. The speaker will be Dr. Floyd Faust, pastor of Broad street Church of Christ in Columbus.

Jackson plans to graduate 15 students May 18 with C. A. "Sunny" Sundberg, retired Lutheran minister from Springfield, as guest speaker.

Monroe lists 13 students for graduation on May 17. Their choice of speaker is not definite.

New Holland has 21 candidates for graduation exercises May 21. Their speaker for the evening has not been chosen.

Perry plans to graduate 11 of her students May 21. Dr. Faust is to be speaker.

Pickaway is to graduate 17 May 20. Dr. Faust to be guest speaker there, too.

SALT CREEK will graduate about 14 on May 19. Dr. W. L. Sprouse, assistant registrar at Ohio State university, to be the speaker.

Scioto lists 25 students for graduation May 25, with Mack Sauer, humorist-editor from Leesburg to be guest speaker.

Walnut has 27 students listed for graduation on May 20, with an official from Wilmington college as speaker.

Bond Campaign Above Quota

SANDUSKY, April 14 — Erie County's model six-day security bond campaign comes to a close today with sales and pledges already far above the $600,000 quota.

A "victory celebration" is planned for late today in Sandusky. Gov. Thomas J. Herbert and Edward F. Bartell, fiscal assistant secretary of the United States treasury, will be the guests of honor.

Final results of the campaign are to be announced at an evening program at which Gov. Herbert and Bartell will speak.

President Truman opens the national security bond campaign tonight in a five-minute broadcast over all networks. It is expected he will laud Erie County's efforts in the model campaign.

Don't Serve Wife Breakfast In Bed-Hines

CLEVELAND, April 14 — Men — don't let your wife talk you into serving her breakfast in bed. If you do, she'll expect it regularly.

That is the warning of Duncan Hines of Bowling Green, Ky., who has won international renown for being an authority on where, what and how to eat good things.

Hines is in Cleveland to attend the 29th annual convention of the National Restaurant Association this week. "There is no reason for anyone having breakfast in bed," the gourmet said. "Women who like their breakfast prepared for them should get up and fix themselves to look pretty."

Hines added that it is perfectly all right for the man of the house to make his own breakfast. He also conceded that women make better carvers than men "because they have a light touch and do not carve in huge chunks."

County To Get $45,097 Share Of Tag Sales

Pickaway County and eight corporations will receive $45,097.20 as their share of the state's initial distribution of $12,439,539.36 in auto license fees.

Fred L. Tipton, county auditor, said the county would receive $38,437.20; Circleville, $4,938.75; Ashville, $781.25; New Holland $332.50; Williamsport, $200; Commercial Point, $145.25; Turlington, $85; South Bloomfield, $45; and Darbyville, $31.25.

Of the county's share, $29,438.45 has been earmarked for new construction or maintenance and repair while the remaining $8,998.75 has been designated for maintenance and repair only.

Edward T. Fogo, state registrar of motor vehicles, said this year's distribution was the largest in the history of the bureau exceeding last year's outlay by $1,013,587.20.

Steubenville Film May Embarrass City, Panel Says

STEUBENVILLE, April 14 — Steubenville labor groups believe the city should have too much civic pride to sanction the filming of its vice conditions.

The groups opposed production of a photoplay, "12 Against the Underworld," adapted from Dr. Norman E. Nygaard's book of 1946 anti-vice crusade by the Steubenville Ministerial Association.

The Jefferson County Trades and Labor Assembly petitioned city council and the Chamber of Commerce to appoint committees to work with labor, civic, professional and veterans groups to "induce the Eagle-Lion Studios if they are determined to produce such a film to eliminate from the script anything that will portray Steubenville as anything but an average, progressive, midwestern industrial community."

The petition charged Dr. Nygaard's book was "not founded on fact and a portrayal of the contents of the book) on screens will react in an embarrassing manner to Steubenville citizens."

guests of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Ankrom and family of Darbyville.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Justus were dinner guests of Mrs. Etta Hoffman Sunday.

Mrs. Golda Cave of Lancaster called Sunday at the Fausnaugh and Ankrom homes.

The desire by a young couple to hear baby sounds in their home backgrounds the Frances Rickett-Dan Rodden story,

"Wanted—One Baby," which has been specially scripted for presentation by Mutual's "The Family Theater" on its broadcast Thursday at 10 p. m.

Paul Henreid will be the host for this presentation.

The story deals with Joe Stanley Page and his wife, Betty. A dream by Joe affects their planned lives—and provides the springboard for the "Family Theater" drama.

Film favorite Robert Young, will make a guest appearance on Mutual's "Background For Stardom" program Thursday at 8:15 p. m. portraying himself in a special dramatization based on his life.

Erskine Johnson, MBS film reporter, will act as narrator.

Looking back on it now, the neighbors who used to live near the California's Imperial Valley town of Calexico are frank to admit they never thought the young Jones boy, "Spike," would ever amount to much as a musician.

There are a few critics around the country today who still say they were absolutely right.

What kind of a musician, these men ask, would call his orchestra the "City Slickers," dress them in horse-blanket checks and flaming red "fright-wigs," arm them with cow bells, washboards, blank cartridge pistols?

What musician would tell with pride of his "pianofortissimo" for students not up to a pianoforte.

But Spike's musical horse-play, whatever his old neighbors or some pedantic critic might think, has captured audiences from coast-to-coast. Whenever Spike and his zany crew appear, people flock into theaters, halls, skating rinks to listen, laugh and applaud.
